Schneider Park Landscape Update

Tree Commission approved the landscape/trail update for the final piece of the trail refresh at Schneider. This will include benches and plantings along the paved path, as well as the stairs from Astor down to the lower path.

One Bexley Project Update

The April 19th leadership planning session was well attended. Based on feedback from that workshop, we are now turning our attention to planning a broader community workshop, to be held on May 18th at Capital's Student Union building.

Undesign the Redline

**Undesign the Redline** is an interactive exhibit that explores the history of structural racism caused by the 1938 redlining maps and how this inequality continues to impact our communities today, focusing on the ways in which we can come together to "undesign" these systems with intentionality.

Systemic challenges today, like inequalities in housing, education, income, criminal justice, and health are far from separate issues. These challenges are rooted in a deep and entangled history of policies, practices, and processes that remain hidden and misunderstood.

Undesign the Redline explores these challenges, reframes them as opportunities, and grounds discussions about race, wealth, opportunity, and power in an honest context that is not about guilt and blame.

This allows everyone to contribute value to the design and development of new projects, partnerships, and decisions that seek to transform communities and move beyond the challenging – and often clouded – situation of our entangled past.

The Undesign the Redline exhibit travels nationally to cities, towns, and communities. It has been localized for Columbus by a committee of local experts and historians, and it will be here for the next several month so that we can learn together, activate, and mobilize into a strong "we" capable of transformation.

Undesign the Redline is at Capital University's Trinity campus (2199 E Main) through May 31st. This week I'll be visiting the exhibit on Thursday, April 27th at 3:00 pm, with a facilitated discussion to follow. Whoever is available is invited to join!

Earth and Arbor Day Celebration Redux

This past weekend our Earth and Arbor Day Celebrations were held, overlapping with the Green Bexley Cleanup Day event as well as a honeysuckle removal event at Jeffrey Park. It was a busy day! We'll be meeting in coming weeks to review all of the events to continue to tweak for future years - let me know if you have any feedback to be considered. Huge thanks and congratulations to all of those who have worked so hard on the earth and arbor month events.
